Liquidity building in Canada's high-quality MLGA sector

By Warren Lovely

In both primary and secondary markets, Canada's highly rated municipal and local government authority (MLGA) sector boasts an enhanced liquidity profile. Look to new issue supply, total amount outstanding and/or secondary trading volume and you'll find that records were set in the first half of 2026. Unprecedented issuance and the resulting growth in the MLGA bond stock is consistent with a clear (and necessary) focus on large-scale/strategic infrastructure investment. While all levels of government in Canada have made capital investment a top priority, the local government sector is a vital cog in the infrastructure machine.

Importantly, the move by municipal and local government authorities to deliver on/facilitate ambitious capital plans has not destabilized underlying credit quality. Relative to provinces, MLGA ratings are (on average) stronger and more resilient/less volatile. Also of note, MLGA spreads demonstrate low(er) beta characteristics. Notwithstanding socioeconomic pressures and intense geopolitical noise, MLGA spreads have proven themselves to be relatively stable in recent years (vs. competing sectors). Overall, bond investors can view Canada's growing stock of MLGA securities as high(er) quality and increasingly liquid.

Chart 1: Primary activity on record-setting pace

MLGA gross bond issuance: YTD basis (Jan-Jun)

Source: NBC, BBG | Note: Refers to publicly syndicated bond deals

MLGA bond supply topped $6bln in the first half, standing ~40% higher than 2025:H1. Even allowing for a seasonal slowdown in the second half (incl. election-related blackouts), a new calendar year supply record should be set in 2026. (Prior full-year record: $8.7bln in 2025)

Chart 2: Growing stock of outstanding MLGA bonds

MLGA bonds outstanding: Sum of 25 issuers

Source: NBC, BBG | Note: Quarterly par value; sum of 25 largest MLGA issuers

Increased bond supply reflects incremental capital investment to grow/protect/transform local economies. It has created a deeper pool of outstanding MLGA bonds. At $65bln as of 2026:Q2, the MLGA bond stock was up 12% Y/Y, having effectively doubled in the past decade.

Chart 3: More bonds being traded than ever before

"Municipal" bond trading volume: YTD basis (Jan-Jun)

Source: NBC, CIRO | Note: MTRS 2.0 reporting regime; all dealers; all counterparties

Not surprisingly, record primary supply and an expanding bond stock have supported sector liquidity, as evidenced by unprecedented secondary bond trading volumes. Over $33bln of municipal bonds traded hands in the first half of the year, implying an annualized turnover ratio of >1X. Clients accounted for two-thirds of total trade, on par with other public sectors.

Chart 4: High-quality MLGA spreads exhibit relative stability

Select credit spreads

Source: NBC, BBG | Inset: Coefficient of variation (CV) in daily spreads (1-10Y)

A representative MLGA bond has demonstrated a relatively low level of spread volatility. Witness a lower coefficient of variation on 10Y spreads than for the bellwether province or crown in the past year. MLGA securities are generally of high quality, with the average credit rating having consistently proven more resilient than the provincial average.
